

HealthTech Connex named One of BC's Top Digital Health Companies with Greatest Growth Potential

HealthTech Connex is pleased to announce that it has been chosen as one of BC's top digital health companies with the greatest growth potential, making the 2017 Ready to Rocket "Emerging Rocket" list for the Digital Health sector.

Ready to Rocket is a unique business recognition list that profiles B.C. technology companies with the greatest potential for revenue growth. Since 2003, the Ready to Rocket list has consistently predicted the revenue growth leaders and the companies most likely to attract investment.

"It is a significant achievement for our team to be chosen amongst some of BC's most rapidly growing companies," says Ryan D'Arcy, President and Chief Scientific Officer of HealthTech Connex. "Our team has been hard at work developing innovative technologies that help improve brain health and we plan on launching a new consumer application in the months to come."

HealthTech Connex advances science into innovative health care technologies and solutions, fuelled by the agile partnerships afforded through our location within the Health and Technology District in Surrey.

With a premier focus on advanced brain technologies, our team of recognized health, science and business leaders helps individuals to understand factors that affect their brain performance and helps them understand their overall brain health.
